METHODOLOGY

Data collection of Alliance for Peacebuilding's (AfP) organizational membership was based on a manual review of each member's website, annual reports, programmatic operations, and publications.

Analysis for each relevant statistic was based upon the availability of data by organization. Member HQ Location and Member Type data was collected for the entire network. Member Organizational Size was based upon available data from 83% of AfP's network (108 organizations) and encompassed full-time/part-time employees at HQ and field offices. Member Expertise was based upon available data from 98% of AfP's network (128 organizations).

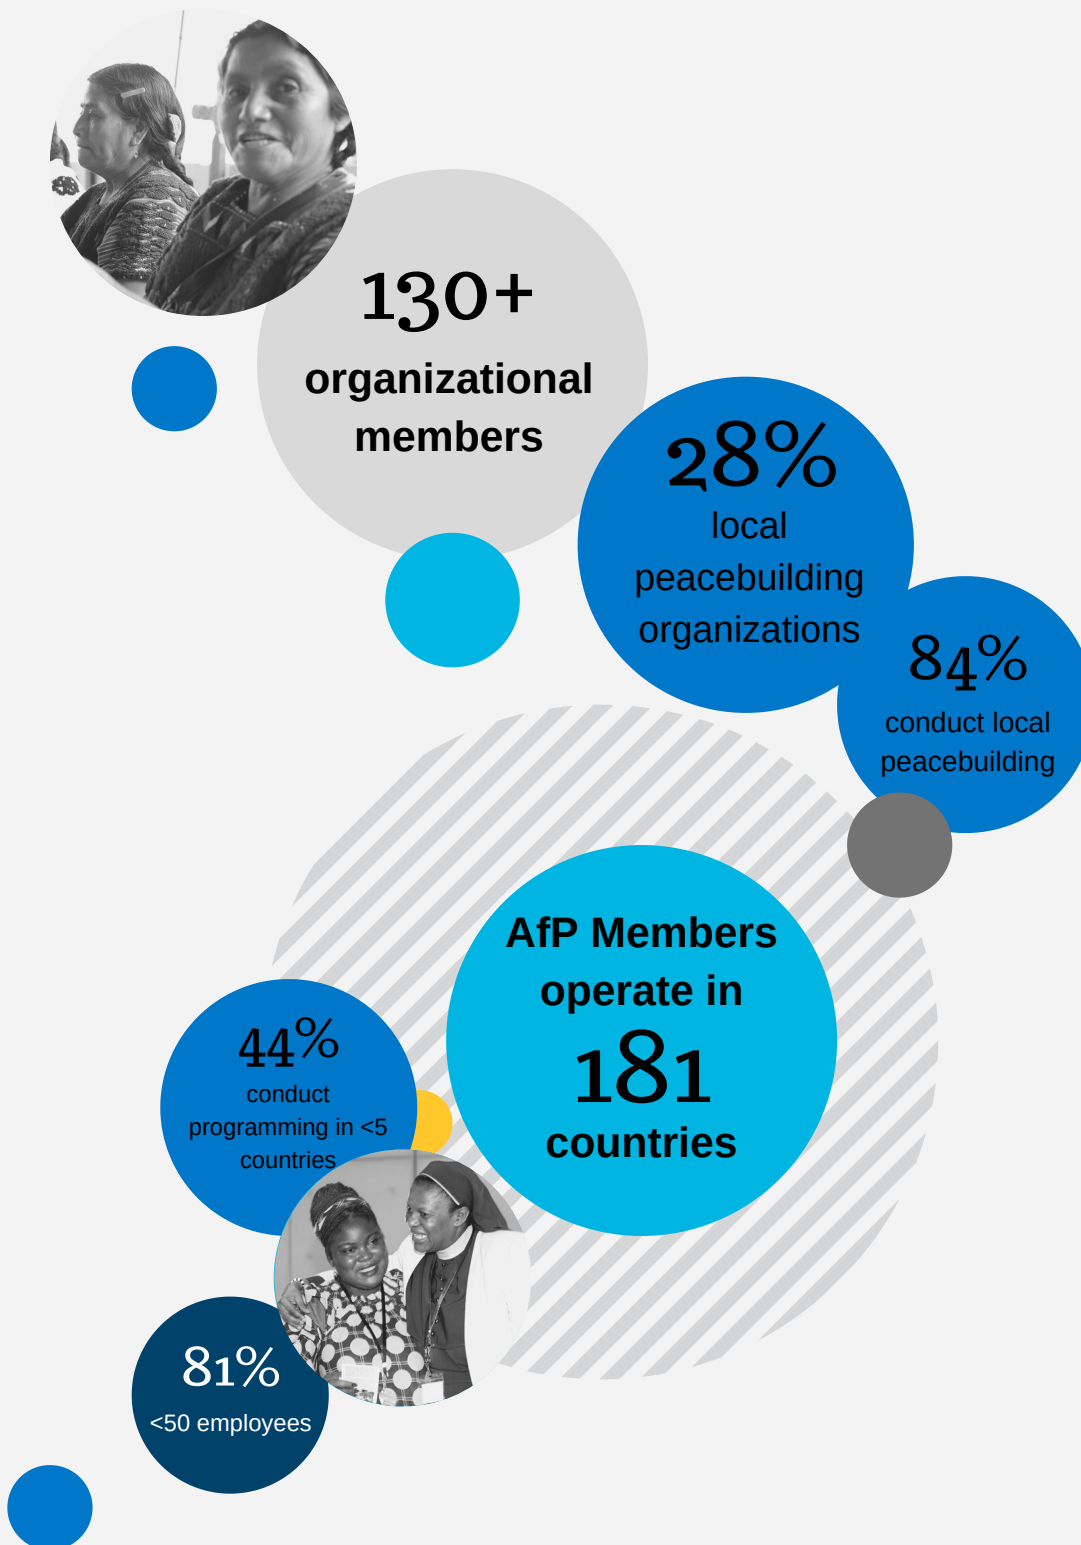

Country operations was based upon 91% of AfP's network (118 organizations) who provided country-level data on programming. Organizations who only provided regional scoping of their programming were not included. Only recent programming was considered and did not include previous efforts or past programming for country counts.

For the purposes of this report, Local Peacebuilding Organizations are those who only conduct programming within their home country. A secondary regionally local analysis was conducted for those who operate within 3 or less neighboring countries, but this did not significantly alter the results. Local Peacebuilding was defined as any organization who conducted peacebuilding within their home country, even if they operate in multiple countries.

This report was written and prepared by Jessica Baumgardner-Zuzik - Senior Director for Learning & Evaluation, Shaziya DeYoung - Research Associate for Learning & Evaluation, Kaizad Irani - L&E Intern, and Uzra Zeya - CEO & President.
